Considering the significance of multiple perspectives in knowledge development, it was felt that the students of law need to interact with law enforcement officials. On 27th of Dec 2011, Mr. Konjok Khampa, IPS, Nagaland Cadre, visited ITMU Law School and discussed with the students on a variety of issues. In his address, Mr. Khampa, provided a thorough insight into the formal relationship shared between police and judiciary. Mr. Khampa explained the application of the Indian Penal Code, Indian Evidence Act, and the Criminal Procedure Code from the police perspective. Coming from an insurgency prone area, Mr. Khampa highlighted the peculiarities unique to the North Eastern states including the enforcement of Armed Forces Special Powers Act and the existing cease fire agreement between the Government and the insurgents. He also briefed them on the hierarchy, individual responsibilities and day to day functioning of police officers in India.
