NCU Law School has organized a special lecture in association with SI-UK Education Council on 25th January, 2016. Dr. Craig Paterson, Principal Lecturer at Sheffield Hallam University in the United Kingdom delivered a special lecture on the topic “Restorative justice and the role of commercial surveillance in criminal justice” to law students at NCU Law School. Dr. Craig Paterson is a Principal Lecturer at Sheffield Hallam University in the United Kingdom. Craig’s main areas of expertise in police education, police reform, restorative justice, and the role of commercial surveillance in criminal justice. Prior to working in academia, Craig led audit and evaluation projects for the UK electronic offender monitoring system and has fifteen years of experience in undertaking research, consultancy and evaluation work. More recently, Dr. Craig has been involved in the development of human rights and legal training programs in Malaysia and India whilst also writing a book on ‘Restorative Policing’ with his colleague, Kerry Clamp, which is due to be published in 2016. Lecture was mainly focused on:

- What is Criminology?
- Why do people commit crime?
- What makes one person a murderer and another corporate criminal?
Dr. Bruce Houlder QC, Mentor, Sheffield Hallam University, UK also accompanied him and shared his experiences about his roles as Director of Service Prosecutions in the Service Prosecuting Authority, Chairman of the Criminal Bar Association, vice-chair of the Professional Standards Committee and as a member of the British Council Law Advisory Committee. Meanwhile Houlder told the students how he was receiving his first educational award since taking The Bar in 1969. He now represents Sheffield Hallam's Helena Kennedy Centre for International Justice as a mentor and visiting barrister.