School of Law organized the screening of a documentary film titled “Can We See The Baby Bump Please?” in association with Sama, a Resource Group for Women and Health on February 3, 2015 in the Auditorium. The film was produced by Sama and directed by Ms. Surabhi Sharma, Executive Producer, Magic Lantern Foundation. The documentary focused on the ethical and legal issues surrounding commercial surrogacy in India that explores questions and concerns through the experiences of surrogate women. The film’s narrative addressed the ethical challenges, medical malpractice, and potential exploitation that could occur when surrogacy is practiced in a legal vacuum, while also highlighting and understanding the interplay of surrogate women’s choices, contexts and compulsions. The screening was followed by an interactive session on ethical and legal issues surrounding surrogacy initiated by Ms. Simran Sawhney from Sama.
